THE DOPAMINE AUDIT · YOUR FIRST FIX

Kill the Scroll

Feeds have no bottom. So build the edge yourself.

WHY THIS IS THE FIGHT

Feeds are bottomless on purpose. There is no last post, no natural place to stop, so "just one more" runs until something outside the app drags you out. The trouble was never starting, it is that nothing inside the app ever tells you that you are done, because the longer you stay, the better it works.

HOW IT WORKS

If the app will not give you an edge, you build one. Two things end a spiral: a hard time limit so the session has an ending, and friction on opening so each visit costs a small effort instead of happening by reflex. Together they turn an endless graze into a short, deliberate visit.

THE FIXES

Pick the single app that eats the most time and put a hard daily limit on it, fifteen minutes to start, and let the cutoff actually cut you off. Log out after each use so getting back in means typing a password, not a tap. Turn off autoplay and the "recommended for you" feed so it stops choosing your next ten minutes. And if one app is a genuine black hole, take it off the phone entirely and only use it on a computer.

SEVEN DAYS

Print this. Run the fix for a week. Circle Y or N each day, one column per day. One honest week tells you more than a month of good intentions.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Stayed inside my daily app limit	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N
Logged out after using it	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N	Y/N

The app that ate the most time this week: _____

THE EVENING CHECK

Each night: what were you actually looking for when you opened it, and did you find it?

The feed will take whatever you give it. Decide what you won't.

This is the fix for the pattern your audit flagged as the tightest grip. Run it for a week before you add another. The other three are waiting when you are ready.
